Dear Sir:

We have your lengthy communication in which you ask us to accept for credit a few pair of Womens Red Stadium Boots because you feel that our salesman talked you into buying these and the result of his judgment was such that you were unable to sell them. You also express the sentiment that the buyer is always right and because of that you wish us to issue you credit for these boots. We could go into a very lengthy conversation as to whether you are right or we are right in your contention but even if we should win the argument with you we would probably lose you for a customer. We still feel that you are worth more to us than these few pair of boots and for that reason we are issuing you credit memorandum for them.

Yours very truly,

PRES.
