Premium Quality Motor Oil With 25c Price Tag Appears on Market

A new premium quality motor oil that will sell for 25 cents a quart was announced this week by the Gulf Refining Company. It will be sold by all service stations at the "Sign of the Orange Disc" in tamper-proof, refinery-sealed cans, as well as in bulk.

This new lubricant, Gulflube, is made by a scientific method of oil refining, known as the Multi-sol process. The process, although considered by scientists to be the finest of the several new selective solvent processes for refining oil, is actually simple to understand. Two cleansing fluids are used which act as "chemical policemen" in the oil. These separate the desirable qualities from the natural impurities. When they have performed their so-called "third-degree," out comes the pure paraffine portion which is then thoroughly dewaxed and filtered.

The development of this process grew out of the great demand for a low-priced premium quality oil that would be capable of better withstanding the high speeds of the present-day motor car. For years Gulf engineers have been keeping pace with the rapid strides made in automotive design and have preceded the introduction of new engine designs with improved oils to meet such new engine requirements.

Even the less expensive cars of today are capable of road speeds approaching 90 miles per hour. At these speeds the pistons are traveling at a terrific rate and the exhaust valve stems are subjected to great heat. This means that an oil of premium quality is needed to provide safe lubrication to all moving parts of the motor. This new premium oil provides an excellent lubricating film, a tighter seal between the piston rings and avoids sticky valves which impair smooth operation and helps motorists to get thousands of miles of trouble-free motoring from their new high-speed cars.
