
Addendum

In last week's Chronicle article about the construction of the Pittsburgh community Eruv, mention of one of the founders -- and prime movers was omitted. Rabbi Eliyahu Safran, former rabbi of Congregation Poale Zedeck, who is now in New York, worked for many years on the Eruv construction. He, along with a handful of community members, did the initial studies that laid the groundwork for the eventual Eruv construction.