

On Sunday next, our brethren of Roumanian birth, will dedicate a Temple in this city. It is an evidence of their devotion to Judaism and a tribute to their God in grateful recognition of the liberty granted them in a new land. Our Roumanian brethren have not long been in our midst, but they have of right earned the respect and high esteem of their co-religionists. They have shown a disposition to be self-helping, to aid their persecuted countrymen and to maintain the cause of their religion in a manner worthy of the highest praise. We hope that there will be before their congregation many years of great spiritual activity.
