Maimonides Institute Carries On European Culture

An event of unusual importance to the cultural life of Pittsburgh and the Nation took place recently, marking the launching of the Maimonides Institute. The assemblage which gathered together to do honor to Rabbi Wolf Leiter, the founder and head of the Institute, was addressed by Dr. Solomon B. Freehof and Professor Abraham S. Halkin, professor of Semitics at Columbia, Jewish Theological Seminary, and Brooklyn College. The founding of the Maimonides Institute was praised by both as a noteworthy step in the development of American Centers of Jewish learning and both paid high tribute to Rabbi Leiter as a scholar and as a leader in this field.

The Institute is located at 3520 Murray Avenue. Its purpose is to publish authoritative books on various phases of Hebrew life and culture. All publications will have the previous endorsement of a board of scholars representing the outstanding
