

Always glad to note any effort that is being made on the part of our neighbors in the smaller communities to promote good-will, I have just received copies of newspapers from New Bethlehem, Pa., giving an account of a Union Thanksgiving service conducted by the Rabbi Eugene Hibshman in one of the leading churches. It seems that the Christians and the Jews decided on a good fellowship gathering and that a Thanksgiving service under Christian and Jewish auspices would be a splendid setting for such an inspirational meeting. Inasmuch as New Bethlehem has but six Jewish families the occasion was all the more remarkable. It indicates that those few

---

Jews are alert and are making the most of their opportunity to promote a better understanding of their people and their faith among their neighbors.